TO RAISE OR NOT TO RAISE

The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Toronto has announced its forthcoming campaign for funds to carry on its activities for the coming year. A hundred thousand dollars is the minimum required to meet the budget. Fifteen thousand dollars is necessary to cover up the present deficit. A campaign committee has been organized and is at the present time making its plans and marshalling its forces. But this undertaking should not be solely the concern of the campaign committee, nor of the officials of the Federation. This campaign should be the vital concern of every Jew of Toronto. No man or woman with character or moral stamina can free himself or herself from the responsibility of caring for the sick and needy, of furnishing shelter for the orphaned, of providing facilities for recreation for the underprivileged, of maintaining all those institutions which a self-respecting community should maintain. The success of Federation means the spiritual success of the Jewish community. The failure of Federation means the moral disaster of the Jewish community. Federation is a communal adventure, in which all are embarked. The skeptic and agnostic, the liberal and reactionary, the Zionist and Socialist, can unite in this cause. No matter what philosophy of life individuals may profess, or what political or economic theory individuals may cherish, all agree that the suffering and pain of the unfortunate should be alleviated. All, therefore, can and should back up Federation, and make it the efficient organization which will bespeak a Jewish community of moral stamina, conscious of its godly traditions.

To attain this goal, it is essential that new subscribers be secured, and that old subscribers increase their dues. To raise or not to raise one's subscription, that is the problem which confronts us all and as we answer that problem so do we demonstrate to the community whether we are MEN or whether we are selfish animals. We must confess that we are weary and disgusted with this haggling and trafficking about increased subscriptions. "I shall raise if X. raises" is the continual refrain. If X. insists in being niggardly, why follow his example? One does not contribute to charities only because one's neighbour does likewise. One gives to charity because one is sympathetic, generous; because one cannot be at ease while widows and orphans languish. One gives to charity because conscience, decency and God demand it. One gives to charity because one is grateful for the kindness of Providence. Not what X. gives should be the criterion. But what should I give; what is my duty; and what my obligation? Generous giving will generate more self-respect, more spiritual ease, and will win for one the love and admiration of one's fellow-men. We know the two or three beautiful personalities whom the Toronto community loves because of their extravagant generosity. Why not join their ranks? Why not win for yourself a beautiful niche in the esteem of the community, as these men have?

The question of to raise or not to raise is a moral test. How will you meet it? It is a simple thing to sit in one's office and answer it negatively. But to those in the field, who have heard the moans of sufferers, who have seen the anaemic faces, who have glimpsed the empty cupboards, to them the answer must be affirmative. We must remember that when we say "no," we are not saying "no" to the Federation of Jewish charities, but we are telling some poor family that it must be cold this winter, some undernourished child that it must continue its hunger. Think of this when you sign your cards! Think of this, you who have subscribed such pitifully small sums in the past! Think of this and your pleasure will turn to ashes, and your joys to bitterness—unless you meet the challenge of Federation, aye, the challenge of God, as befits men and women made in His image.

WELCOME TO THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Announcement has been made by the West London Synagogue of British Jews, known as the Berkeley Street Synagogue, that Rabbi Joel Blau, of New York, has accepted a call to become its Chief Minister. Rabbi Blau is a graduate of the Hebrew Union College, and will be the second graduate of that institution to be called to serve the London community, the other being Rabbi Mattuck, of the liberal synagogue. Rabbi Blau is not only an able pulpiteer, but is likewise a writer of distinction. Articles of his have appeared in all the leading American periodicals. He has also contributed regularly to Jewish weeklies. His "Wonder of Life," published recently, a book of sermons, stamps him as one of the outstanding preachers of the age, and has won him international recognition.

Our wishes go out to Rabbi Blau as he joins the ranks of Jewish leaders in London, and we congratulate the West London Synagogue as we welcome Rabbi Blau to the British Empire.

ANOTHER DREYFUS

"Eternal vigilance is the cost of tolerance," says Hendrik Van Loon, in his new, fascinating and stimulating book on "Tolerance." How true this is, this generation is learning, and the Jew is learning at a bitter cost. Who would have thought fifteen years ago, that another Dreyfus case could occur in a civilized, enlightened and Christian country. Yet that is exactly what is happening in Poland. Stanislaw Steiger, a Polish student, is being tried for having thrown a bomb at the Polish president in Lemberg, September 5, 1924. The evidence by which Steiger was indicted was of the flimsiest character. Indications are that the police have tampered with witnesses, and that all the underhand methods to which unscrupulous beaurocracy can resort to, when it desires, have been used against him. In the midst of the trial the actual bomb thrower, now a refugee in Berlin, confessed his guilt. The German police knew that Steiger was not guilty, and notified the Polish authorities. This the latter ignored. And now, despite the fact that public confession has been made which clearly establishes Steiger's innocence, the case against him continues, and he is still being tried.

More than thirty years ago, Albert Dreyfus, a captain in the French army, was accused, found guilty of treason, on manufactured evidence, and sentenced to ten years of imprisonment in a French prison on Devil's Island. Later his innocence was proved. Dreyfus was the victim of religious intolerance, and so is Steiger!

Poland, which but a few years ago was groaning under Russian tyranny, herself the victim of persecution, has now turned persecutor. She has fallen a prey to fanaticism and bigotry, and is using the Jew as the scapegoat. When will mankind learn the lesson of tolerance? Meanwhile, it seems as if another victim will be added to the long list of those sacrificed throughout the centuries on the altar of intolerance!

The Canadian Jewish Review urges organizations and subscribers to send in all the news they know about, but material is left out when at all difficult to read. No single-spaced typing accepted. News typed in double or triple space receives the best attention. Otherwise it should be written very plainly in ink on one side of the paper only with names and initials accurate. Articles concerning elections, appointment of committees, etc., which do not include names of those chosen will not be used. Accounts of engagements, marriages, births and deaths must bear name and telephone number of sender for easy identification. NORTH END WOMEN'S CLUB

The North End Women's Club gave a bridge for four hundred women Tuesday, December 1.

Patrolman Michael Horowitz, of the Clinton Street Station, New York, walking west on Madison Street, saw a crowd gather and then heard the shout of "Fire!" Running to the house he saw baffled would-be-rescuers retreating from the doorway and heard some one call, "There are sick children in there!" Lowering his head Horowitz dashed through the flames, almost colliding with a Mrs. Schwartz, who was rushing out with her 5-month-old baby wrapped in a blanket. The patrolman thrust her into the arms of kindly neighbors and bored back through the long, narrow hall to the rear flat, where 5-year-old Oscar, ill with scarlet fever, was crying in terror. Wrapping the sick boy in bedclothes, Horowitz ran out again and this time it was Mrs. Schwartz, frantic with fear, who passed him. She had not known that the patrolman was on his rescuer's errand, and, Jennie safe, had returned for Oscar. Handing Oscar to Morris Zalkowitz, a vice-president of theNew York City Newsboys' and Newsdealers' Protective Association, Horowitz ventured a third time into the flames. The firemen had arrived by this time and their help was needed to assist the patrolman, burdened with Mrs. Schwartz, out of the building. The firemen made short work of quenching the fire. Horowitz blushed when a reporter congratulated him upon his bravery.

ORTHODOX UNION INAUGURATES CONTEST

New York.—At the last executive committee meeting of the Women's Branch of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, Julius Hyman, one of the four-minute men, spoke chiefly on the approaching Sesqui-Centennial celebration to be held in Philadelphia in honour of the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Hyman outlined the plans for a nation-wide essay contest among the children of the religious schools under the auspices of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, on the subject, "Our Bible as the Source of Inspiration for the Ideals upon Which Our American Government Was Founded." The winners of this contest—a boy and girl in each of the forty-eight states—are to be given a free trip to Philadelphia Exposition by their respective communities.

The basis of this contest is the Mosaic Verse, "Proclaim liberty throughout the land and to all the inhabitants thereof." (Leviticus xxv, Verse 10 which appeared on the original liberty bell in Philadelphia.

Louis Feist, a retired crockery merchant, died in New York, at the age of 102. Until a few weeks ago he was in possession of his mental and physical faculties and was keenly interested in the events of the day. He had no special rules for preserving his health and never worried about the matter. He was a native of Waldeck, Germany, and, after serving in the army there, came to the United States in 1850. Five children survive.

The entertainment committee has a programme for the winter to go into effect after the Chanukah Ball the fifteenth annual ball of the Association at the Windsor Hotel, December 13. The programme calls for a social function in the gymnasium nearly every Sunday evening to be run by each one of the inner circles in turn. These functions will consist of a programme of entertainment or education followed by a social and dancing.

The "Y" Orchestra plans concerts each to be followed by a social function. The first of these takes place December 27.

The executive director wants to organize a Chess Club for inside and outside competition. Members wishing to register do so at the office.

TO RAISE FUNDS FOR BROTHERHOOD WORK

A campaign is now on to secure $15,000 for the expansion of the work of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods. At a recent meeting of the executive board of this organization, it was decided that the Brotherhoods finance their own activities. A campaign committee was appointed with Herman Karpeles, of Newark, N.J., as chairman. Mr. Karpeles is now ill, and in his stead Grover M. Moscowitz, of Brooklyn, N.Y., is acting chairman of the drive.

The funds that will be raised by the Brotherhoods will be used for the employment of an executive director who will devote his entire time to Brotherhood activity, and for the carrying on of Brotherhood work throughout the country, organizing new bodies in cities where such organizations do not at present exist.

There are eighty-five individual Brotherhoods affiliated with the national federation, and steps are now being taken, under the leadership of Mr. Moscowitz, to have campaign committees organized in each Brotherhood. The plan of the campaign is to have every Brotherhood raise a sum equivalent to $2.00 per member. In other words, if a Brotherhood has a membership of 100, its quota will be $200. As to the method of raising this money, discretion is left to the Brotherhoods themselves. They may adopt any plans they desire with regard to raising their quotas.

Were the good old days so good, and do times change so radically? Listen to Rabbi Meldola de Sola preaching on idolatry in Montreal. He speaks in scathing terms of the practice of shopping on the Sabbath and says it is a wanton and shameful desecration of a holy day. People who do this deify convenience. They choose to consider it inconvenient to buy on some other day. Why, asks the rabbi, should a man smoke on the Sabbath and insult his observing co-religionists by doing it in public? People who smoke, play golf and go to the theatre on the Sabbath are bowing the knee to pleasure. The rabbi denounces the people who observe the dietary laws in their houses but partake of "trafe" food when in the company of non-Jews. They worship the idols of appetite and assimilation. Others observe the dietary laws in the city and throw them to the winds in the country because of extra expense in getting the meat. They have an abundance for the frivolities of society but little for the laws of Judaism. To rebuke the wrong doer is a duty enjoined by the Torah but if the wrong-doer is wealthy and of social position his wrong-doing gives little concern to a certain class of people. There are men and women who greet him with smiles and feel flattered at his attention all because he has wealth and position. This is a worship of society.... It is not to-day that the rabbi is speaking. This is the gist of one of his sermons preached this time of the year 1899.

The Hungarian rabbis have taken up the fight against immodesty in women's dress, and it looks as though they're going to do the thing efficiently. They have already placarded the lobbies of synagogues with the warning that "women en decollete will be asked to leave the synagogue."

If the action of the recent convention of American orthodox rabbis against women's dress leaves anything like this to be desired, it must be remembered that the assembly at least inspired the Hungarian rabbis in what they are doing.

Not that the American rabbis didn't let the world know where they stand, too. Of course the days may be longer in Hungary, or the women even more brazenly unfettered as to clothes, or the real problems fewer, or the rabbis more aggressive, but it cannot be said that the American rabbis let the matter go without a paragraph of denunciation. There are plenty of paragraphs in this world and a supply of denunciation as long as women remain the provocative creatures they are.

So the recent convention doesn't need to take a back seat for any. Its members talked earnestly and heatedly on the subject of scant garb for ladies, some pleading with diffidence, and perhaps discretion, that they could not prescribe women's dress and others with more backbone declaring they shou'd and must record their disapproval and persuade the ladies on to more modest attire. So they "looked with disfavour upon the laxity of conduct so prevalent at present, and particularly the manner of dress at present customary among the female sex, which cannot be considered decent and modest clothes." They urged "the daughters of Israel to clothe themselves with proper modesty, particularly when attending services, so as not to conflict with the holiness of places."

Thus they did their best with regard to the Jewish daughter thick with lipstick and weird with rouge and scantily clad against the winds that blow. She may be just as good at heart as she was the year the skirts were long but she looks a lot more reckless, and the rabbis have told her that she should mend her appearance.

But was not the moment that they did it ill-advised? It seems that they went out of their way a little to reveal their sad lack of power. When they took no stand it could not be said of them that they had been disobeyed. Now, unless they are deaf, they must hear laughter, mocking if indulgent. At the convention the American orthodox rabbis lauded the papal attitude toward immodesty of women's dress. In their own certain failure to change the mode maybe they will be comforted by what happened in Italy following the pope's ban on short skirts. His denunciation was as a voice crying in the wilderness. The crusade in favour of women's fashions made entirely in Italy has failed and the result is skirts shorter, narrower, gaunier, with the ornate garter a recognized part of a lady's outfit. So one might almost conclude that ministerial treatment of the malady seems to aggravate the trouble. Perhaps it were better to leave well enough, such as it is, alone.

Installation Address

Delivered by Jesse Schwartz, Rabbi Goel Tzedec (University Avenue Synagogue), Sunday, November 22, 1925

This is indeed a most important day in my life. It is a long road that I travelled before I arrived at this moment. It was a road along which I touched Jewish life in its various phases in the greatest Jewish community in the world. It was a road along which I had the opportunity of feeling the pulsating life of our people from many angles.

It was a journey in the course of which I forged in my own humble way my attitude towards Jewish traditions, towards the Jewish past and towards the Jewish future. The process of hammering out a point of view would have been impossible without the inspiration of many men from whom I received gleams of insight into the meaning of the story of the Jewish people. But to no single individual or group do I owe so much as I do to the Jewish Theological Seminary. It was at the seminary that I met a group of men whose self-sacrificing devotion to Jewish scholarship filled me with the deepest reverence for the Jewish past, to the study of which these men have been devoting their lives. There I found men who combine in themselves the profoundest Jewish scholarship with the highest secular culture, steadfast loyalty to Jewish traditions, with a keen understanding of modern life. Above all, I was given at the seminary the key to the great storehouse of Jewish law and Jewish lore. It is but a humble tribute that I can pay at this moment to that great institution of Jewish learning.

It is indeed a most joyous event for me to have you, Dr. Finkelstein, present at my induction into this pulpit. When I stand and preach in this pulpit, I consciously and unconsciously reflect some of that love of Jewish traditions that I imbibed from you in the classroom and in the contacts of a close friendship during the last few years. I know that I owe to you, Dr. Finkelstein, much of that sense of the ultimate worthwhileness of the work of the rabbi in American Jewish life, without which a feeling of impotency to attain immediate results is apt to overwhelm and dishearten him.

You, Dr. Abramowitz, have toiled for the past twenty years in this Dominion on behalf of traditional Judaism. You have contributed to the maintenance of the especially strong attachment of Canadian Jews to Jewish traditions. I shall owe much to your ministry in Canada. Your telling influence in Canadian Jewry will enable me to find a more willing ear to listen to my pleas for the preservation of traditional Judaism.

You know, Rabbi Isserman, how pleased I am that you are here with us tonight. Cordiality and mutual respect have marked our relations. There are many problems in the Jewish community of Toronto that will demand our fullest co-operation. Doubtless there will be at times sharp differences of opinion and I hope that we will each have the courage of our convictions to frankly and fearlessly voice them. However, I anticipate that our mutual regard will prevent anything from marring the many opportunities we shall have of working shoulder to shoulder in many causes on behalf of Canadian Jewry.

Rabbi Gordon, you are my older colleague in this synagogue. Though it be different elements in the synagogue to which we each make our especial appeal, we can look forward to the friendliest co-operation in the task of strengthening the future of Goel Tzedec.

Now, my friends, what do I consider my tasks as the occupant of this pulpit? One of the factors that primarily drew me to this synagogue was the feeling I had, that here in Goel Tzedec I would always find a willing response to the [illegible] in what I consider the most crucial, the most momentous, the most decisive task that faces the Jew of this generation. I knew that Goel Tzedec had always demonstrated its belief in the need of a homeland for the Jewish people in Palestine. I would expect no less from a congregation that stands on the platform of traditional Judaism.

I believe that the survivability of Judaism in the modern world depends upon the establishment of a spiritual centre for the Jewish people in Eretz Yisroel. Eretz Yisroel to-day is the acid test by which we must measure the sincerity of the desire of any Jew at the present time to perpetuate Judaism.

In the past Zion was to the Jewish people but a memory and a hope. The particular conditions that surround Jewish life in the modern world make it imperative that Zion become an actuality to the Jewish people. I know that Goel Tzedec will at all times hearken with a full sense of understanding and responsibility to my pleas for the rebuilding of the ancient Jewish homeland.

I am most pleased to come to this community at a moment which marks the completion of the largest effort the Jews of Toronto have undertaken on behalf of Jewish education. I refer to the opening of the Talmud Torah.

You know, my friends, where I stand on the problem of Jewish education. I believe that we stand or fall on that issue. If we have a Jewish youth that has a thorough Jewish education, the future of traditional Judaism is assured. If we fail there, all our beautiful synagogues, all our professions of loyalty to the Jewish past will be of little avail.

I shall test my efforts on behalf of this congregation by the success I have in bringing its members to an understanding of the need of providing a Jewish education for the Jewish youth. That means much more than convincing those associated with Goel Tzedec of the need of providing Talmud Torahs for the city in general. It means bringing home to them the conviction that they must see to it that their own children receive a proper Jewish education.

I know that the rabbis have said: "Take heed of the children of the poor, for from them shall the Law go forth." And in this as in so many other ways the rabbis manifested their keen insight into human nature and the psychology of the Jewish people. We know that prosperity means so many obstacles in the path of our efforts to give a sound Jewish training to the Jewish child of to-day.

But we cannot have a vicarious Judaism. We cannot provide Jewish education for other children and release ourselves from the obligation to provide the same education for our own.

"Poverty," as the rabbis say, "befits Israel." Nevertheless we cannot pray for the impoverishment of Israel, and we cannot permit the accumulation of material goods to necessarily predicate the corollary of no Jewish education for our children.

I shall not be satisfied with a Sunday School education. It is impossible to present to the Jewish child something substantial out of the great treasure-house of Jewish teachings in the course of a paltry hour and a half on Sunday mornings during nine months of the year. I hope to convince the members of this congregation of the need of week-day Jewish instruction. That may mean more Talmud Torahs. If Jewish education demands them, they will have to be provided.

If we want the Jewish youth to be loyal to traditional Judaism, no milk and water curriculum will do. It will not be enough to teach a few stories and a catechism. We must insist on a programme that provides stronger and more nourishing spiritual food. At the basis of any programme for Jewish education comes and must come the study of the Hebrew language. Jewish history shows that a translated Judaism has been a transitory Judaism, that has ultimately passed into oblivion.

If Jewish education were merely the imparting of dry intellectual information the use of translations would matter little. But in the Hebrew school and the Talmud Torah we aim to convey the heart and the soul of Judaism. And the language which our ancestors used to frame their thoughts and emotions became identified with these thoughts and emotions. You really cannot penetrate into the heart of Judaism without possessing a knowledge of the Hebrew language.

As Ahad Ha'am, the great Jewish thinker, pointed out a generation ago, our language is like a vessel in which we may pour new vintages, but the vessel, the Hebrew language, must be retained.

Goel Tzedec stands for the retention of the traditional prayer book. And that means the use of the Hebrew language as the language of our prayers. The spirit of our prayers can really be understood only in the Hebrew language.

A sound Jewish education will make the Jewish youth safe for the Jewish people. I have faith in the American Jewish youth. They have courage, they have a freshness of outlook. The Jewish youth to-day are looking for guidance. The rabbi has the opportunity of demonstrating to them that

TEL AVIV HAS COMPULSORY SCHOOL SYSTEM

Tel Aviv will be the first city in modern Jewish Palestine to introduce a compulsory public school system, modelled after the ancient system of the High Priest Joshua Ben Gamala, according to a decision of the municipality on October 18.

The resolution of the municipality, as cabled by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, introduces a drastic change in the Tel Aviv educational system. No child is to be rejected from the Hebrew school, irrespective of the ability of his parents to pay the tuition fee. The parents will pay the school fee directly to the municipality which will be responsible for the maintenance of the Hebrew schools.

Up to the present, the Hebrew schools in Tel Aviv, as well as the Hebrew schools in other Palestine cities, were under the supervision of the Zionist Executive, the Executive being responsible for the educational budget.

Tel Aviv is the first municipality to accept responsibility for its educational budget. It was declared that the municipality will receive £12,000 annually from parents of pupils and £8,000 from the Zionist Executive.

It is reported that Dr. Weizmann expressed his willingness to come to America during this winter to assist in the five million dollar drive for Palestine institutions, sponsored by the Zionist Organization of America.

CLERK OF THE COURT

TORONTO, October 27th, 1925.

Mr. Joseph A. Woolf,
Executive Director,
Federation of Jewish Philanthropies,
218 Simcoe St., City.

Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge the eighth annual report of the Federation and have noted its contents. I understand you are about to enter another campaign to increase the membership of the Federation and I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the splendid work that is being done by one of your charities with which I come in close contact. I have special reference to the Jewish Big Brothers and also the Jewish Boys' Club, which is closely affiliated to it. It is interesting for you and for all your subscribers to know that since this Club and the Jewish Big Brothers have come into existence that they have cut down remarkably the number of Jewish boys and girls coming into our Court, which goes to prove conclusively that their work of prevention is effective. I would like to make this observation that in preventing boys and girls from delinquency the Federation is making an investment that will have a tremendous return in its importance. The starting of a boy right in many cases means the saving to society of the wreckage of a criminal life and gives to society the service of a competent and happy home, which this boy is likely to develop.

I trust that when you are on your drive for members that you will be good enough to come to me and give me the chance to become a member of the Jewish Federation.

Sincerely yours,

H. S. Mott
Judge.

LAST NIGHT—

Last night three children burned their eyes with tears;
They saw Death strike their mother—Chilled and scared
They beg the Sons of Israel for their love . . . .
—Suppose nobody cared?

Last night a mourning widow sobbed in pain
That one had died and that her life was spared—
Homeless and lone, she seeks a Brother's arm. . . . .
—Suppose nobody cared?

An old, old man trod by these streets last night;
He walked—a patriarch—as on he fared—
Feeble with age, he craves some nook of rest.
—Suppose nobody cared?

Suppose nobody cared if worn old men,
Widows and orphans cry for help somewhere. . . . ?
But Israel's children cannot spurn their pleas:—
Thank God we care!

Thank God we care! Thank God we still recall
The ancient words borne down from heaven above:
RELIGION IS NOT WORDS; GOD BLESSES

LACK OF INTEREST IN OLD FOLKS' HOME?

The Jewish Old Folks' Home held a joint business and nomination meeting, 31 Cecil Street, Sunday, November 29, with an attendance of 100 members. The executive insisted upon B. Weiss retaining the presidency for another year. In refusing the nomination, Mr. Weiss referred to the lack of interest on the part of many prominent Jews in the city towards the Home. Fifty invitations had been extended without a single response, and so the meeting found it necessary to postpone nominations until December 13.

CONCERT AND DANCE FOR HALUTZOTH MOVEMENT

There were a group of women in Eastern Europe who could no longer watch objectively the growth and development of Palestine. As a result of this they left their homes and schools and migrated to Palestine where they started the "Halutzoth" movement. To date they have already organized four co-operative colonies in various districts of Palestine. The first three of these devote their time to general agricultural work, while the fourth "Kvutzah" has established a plant nursery by which means they hope to beautify and help the fertilization of the land.

For the purpose of carrying on this work of helping their brethren in the actual building of a Jewish homeland according to Jewish ideals and principles, they need immense sums of money. It is for this reason that the young movement, "The Woman's Organization to Help the Halutzoth in Palestine" has been organized all over the continent.

The local organization has already attempted several small undertakings for this cause, and is now proceeding on a larger scale with a concert and dance, to be held in the Labour Lyceum, Spadina Avenue, on Friday evening, December 11.

Thirty-five tombstones on Jewish cemetery of Czerno-Bukowina, were taken away by thieves, according to reports received here from Czernowitz. The police have not succeeded in finding the culprits.

A dozen bright-eyed old women, the oldest of whom was 101, held seats of honour at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Harlem Home of the Daughters of Israel, at Fifth Avenue and 107th Street. They were some of the oldest occupants of the Daughters of Israel Home for the Destitute Aged. The new building will accommodate more than 300. It will cost about $1,000,000, half of which must still be raised by sub-

AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS TO ADVOCATE AMENDMENT HUMANIZING IMMIGRATION LAW

At the first meeting of the executive committee of the American Jewish Congress held last Sunday afternoon, November 22, at the Hotel Majestic, New York, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, President of the Congress, reiterated the demand voiced at the last session of the Congress in Philadelphia, that the Joint Distribution Committee issue a budgetary statement showing approximately what proportion of the fifteen millions to be contributed by American Jewry for relief in Eastern Europe, is to be used in the project of Jewish colonization in Russia.

The executive committee decided to initiate an intensive propaganda in an effort to mobilize public sentiment in favour of a bill sponsored in Congress by Congressman Nathan D. Perlman for amending the Immigration Law so that husbands, wives, children, parents, brothers and sisters of citizens and of residents who had declared their intention of becoming citizens shall be admitted to the United States as non-quota immigrants. It was the opinion of the Committee that organizations of non-citizens agitating for legislation should not be encouraged.

Dr. Wise, in announcing the appointment of committees, named Carl Sherman, former Attorney General of New York, as Chairman of the Administrative Committee, stating that the work involved in administering the affairs of the American Jewish Congress has increased considerably and that he desired Mr. Sherman to share responsibility with him. For the important post of directing the publications of the Congress, Dr. Wise selected Dr. A. J. Rongy as chairman of the Committee on Publications. At the head of other important committees Dr. Wise named Nathan D. Perlman, Chairman, Committee on Immigration; Mr. Joseph Barondess, Chairman, Committee on Organization; George I. Fox, Chairman, Office Committee; and Arthur M. Lamport, Committee on Finance and Budget.

In the evening, a farewell reception was tendered to Mme. Anita Mueller-Cohen, who was the guest of the American Jewish Congress during her stay in this country. Dr. Wise was toastmaster and the speakers were Mrs. Richard Gotheil, Carl Sherman, Mrs. Edward Jacobs, Judge Julian W. Mack and Dr. A. J. Rongy.

the tenets of the Jewish faith are not incompatible with the scientific knowledge the youth acquires in academic halls. The great trouble in the past has been that as a rule the Jewish youth of academic training never came into contact with the Jewish teacher who could meet them on their own ground.

The Jewish youth are quick to detect pretension and insincerity. A Jewish leader to-day must come to the Jewish youth with a sincere message. They will suffer no pretension and no insincerity, especially when it comes from the pulpit.

The greatest safeguard against pretension and hollowness in the pulpit is continual devotion to study. To the man who occupies a pulpit in the synagogue it means not only the pursuit of general studies. It means the constant study of the great sources of Jewish knowledge. The rabbi must be a student of the sources of Jewish ideas and ideals.

The rabbi to-day must come to the synagogue and frankly put the query: "Is the rabbi to be merely a social worker or is he still to strive after scholarship if he is to deserve to bear the ancient and most honourable title of rabbi?" Congregations must understand that the function of a rabbi is to be a preacher and a teacher. The rabbi is untrue to his calling, if he permits himself to become a social butterfly, whirling about from one social function to another.

From social butterflying to sensationalism in the pulpit is but a short step. Nothing that the rabbi can do so degrades the pulpit as using it for the spreading of sensational ideas. It is simple enough to pander to the tastes of the mob. But Judaism has never been a mob religion. Its great messages came from men who ever fought the mob. Its moral ideals came from men who refused to countenance the standards of the mob. The rabbi must preach with his eye on the minds and hearts of his hearers and not on the headlines of the next day's newspaper. You cannot teach Judaism through newspaper reports.

The pulpit is not the only place for the expounding of the doctrines of Judaism. More and more will the rabbi have to turn to the classroom, to intensive work with small groups for conveying Jewish knowledge to his people. The study circle will at least occupy as important a place in the efforts of the rabbi as the pulpit. The rabbi must be a teacher as well as a preacher.

The rabbi as a teacher should always emphasize the old Jewish ideal of Jewish education from childhood on through adult life. We must not only get away from the Sunday School conception of Jewish training. We must continue our Jewish education even beyond the period of adolescence. We must realize the importance of the study of the Torah in its broadest connotation throughout the life of the individual Jew.

This emphasis on adult Jewish education may mean a new departure in the work of the American rabbinate. It is a new path that is essential if the synagogue is to really function at the present time. It is imperative if the intelligent American Jew is to hammer out for himself a point of view which will enable him to meet with vision and with loyalty to the substance of Jewish traditions the problems involved in the adjustment of those traditions to the conditions surrounding Jewish life in America.

What should be the attitude of the rabbi to the general problems of the community? I am fully aware of the social problems that are agitating every modern community, of conditions of injustice that are to be found in every city and country. I am fully aware that there are problems of capital and labour and that there are many forms of social injustice that have to be rectified.

I think I may say without any presumptuousness that I have followed quite closely the progress of social reform during the past ten years. I have seen many a social reform heralded as the key to social salvation very quickly replaced by some other prescription for the cure of society's ills. And it is simple enough to play the role of the demagogue by becoming an exponent of every new social theory.

I have learned, however, to respect expert opinion. No man can be an expert on every subject. It is the rabbi's duty to stand for social justice, but he must be sure that his stand in any social conflict in the community is the result of the study of expert opinions and of an impartial examination of the issues involved.

This is my platform. It is in the light of the underlying principles of this platform that I intend to serve the Jewish community of Toronto.

KINGSTON, ONT.

Sunday night, November 22, in Beth Israel Synagogue, the United Brothers of the young boys of Kingston presented a scroll to the synagogue. This club was organized about a year ago by Rev. S. Petegorsky, who has been in Kingston for the past two and a half years. Rev. S. Petegorsky paid a tribute to the boys. The synagogue was decorated with Jewish flags and Union Jacks. Jewish and English anthems were sung by the audience. The scroll was brought into the synagogue under a chupi, with songs rendered by Rev. S. Petegorsky and his choir. Collection was taken up. Covers trimmed with silver, imported from New York, for the other scrolls were donated by the Jewish ladies. Refreshments were served under the supervision of Mrs. Petegorsky. I. Cohen, president of the synagogue, spoke. M. Sugarman is secretary of the congregation.

TIMMINS, ONT.

The Daughters of Israel, Hadassah Chapter, held a bazaar, October 28 and 29. Miss Rose Levine was convener. The following assisted, Mesdames L. Halperin, S. Bucknetsky, E. Cantor, S. Feldman, D. Mitchell, L. Helperin; and Misses Alice Martin, Becky Levine, Sadie and Anne Feldman. Four hundred and ninety dollars was realized. Three hundred and fifty dollars was sent to headquarters for the Keren Hayesod, as the balance of their $500.00 pledge towards that fund for 1925. One tree was bought in the name of the newly born infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Feldman.

More than 2,000 persons, attending a memorial meeting in honour of the late Mrs. Bertha Dworsky, founder of the Home of Daughters of Jacob, at 167th Street and Teller Avenue, the Bronx, last Sunday night heard Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, Justice Louis D. Gibbs and others eulogize Mrs. Dworsky for having founded what they characterized as the largest institution of its kind in the world for aged and infirm Jewish people. The Home, where the meeting was held, has an estimated value of more than $1,000,000. Mrs. Dworsky founded it twenty-nine years ago and developed it until it reached its present proportions, housing more than 500. The nine sons and daughters of Mrs. Dworsky pledged themselves to carry on the charitable work of their mother after they had received engraved resolutions adopted by those active in conducting the institution.

Why Federation Needs Money

A Few Typical Cases of Family Relief

N— Family

This is one of the largest and in many respects one of the most helpless of Federation families. In addition to the parents there are ten children, all under fifteen. The father suffers from obesity, weak heart and high blood pressure. He has been unable to earn a living for the last six years. Although an electrician, the father, because of his poor health, is absolutely unable to keep a job long enough to earn any kind of a living to keep his brood of ten youngsters in food, clothing, etc. The children have never been properly fed and clothed and often have to stay away from school because of illness. The family lives in a very poor house at a rental of $15.00 per month.

Practically every agency of Federation has been called upon to assist. The Medical Service Bureau and the Mount Sinai Hospital are frequently pressed into service. The Maternity Ladies' Aid have made layettes and looked after the mother on more than one occasion. Several of the children have been taken to the Children's Home during the mother's illness. In the summer, the mother and younger babies go to the Mother's Rest Cottage at Bronte, the boys to the Boy's Camp, and the girls to the Girl's Fresh Air Cottage at Whitby. The Federation through the Family Welfare Bureau has given this family, for months, not less than $10.00 every week, two quarts of milk daily, clothes, and occasionally rent.

Since January 1, 1925, this family has received from Federation, $275.00, and in the past two years, a total of $597.00.

V—— Family

What can be done with a deserted family, where the wife and three or four babies are left to shift for themselves?

Mrs. V—— is such a woman. A delicate, little woman of only twenty-five, her husband deserted her and left her to look after three children, all under six years. The mother cannot leave the children to go to work, especially when all three are sickly. All enlightened social service is against that.

Through Federation, the husband was traced and made to contribute $7.00 per week. The Federation pays Mrs. V— —'s rent, plus $3.00 weekly, one quart of milk daily, shoes, clothing, medical service, etc.

To date, since February 1, 1925, Mrs. V— — has received from Federation over $286.00.

The Z—— Family

The Z— family consists of the father, an old, sickly man of over sixty, the mother, in the insane asylum, two older children who, unable to get along with their father, left home, and five younger children. The oldest child at home, a girl of fourteen, was causing great difficulty. There was continual quarreling between her and her father, and also between this girl and the younger children. This was aggravated by economic conditions.

The father, who had been working, lost his job, and was peddling with a push-cart earning only from 15 cents to 75 cents a day. The oldest girl was refusing to look after the house, which meant that the old father looked after the four little children. He was mother, father and housekeeper. The house was in a wretchedly dirty condition, the children were unclean, unkempt and were living on the streets more than in the house.

To save the younger children from following in the footsteps of the two older children, the Federation planned to have the oldest girl of fourteen placed in a private home, where she could still continue school. The woman of the home was to act as mother, guardian and friend. The four younger children would be boarded out in another private home. The father would sell his household goods and get a room for himself. He believed he could earn sufficient for his own needs. He will assist his family as much as possible.

At present the oldest girl, who has been under the doctor's care, has been placed in a very fine home. She is still continuing at school but a working permit is being obtained for her. She is being boarded at the cost of $6.00 a week. The other four children have been placed in a very fine foster-home, a home very different than the one to which they were accustomed. Instead of living in the slums and in wretchedness, they have been moved into a fine residential street, in a beautiful home, and have been entrusted to the care of a woman who has for a great number of years been looking after children.

For the keep of these children, Federation is paying $25 per week.

This family has received from Federation the past six weeks over $115.00.

The C—— Family

This family includes parents and three tots under six years. The father is a pants presser, but for the past two years has had neither regular work nor even many small jobs. He is of low mental calibre, unable to cope with his family's needs, a real shlemiel.

The mother is a thin, emaciated little woman with scarcely enough strength and energy to keep herself alive. The children are sickly, peaked and undernourished.

The entire family lives in a small unpapered two-roomed flat, in an old deteriorated house for which they pay $14 rent. Both parents and all three children occupy the one bedroom.

Proper care of this family would mean better quarters at a higher rental, weekly allowance of not less than $10.00 for food, at least two quarts of milk daily, clothes, etc.

Federation has been able to assist this family with one quart of milk daily, $5.00 weekly, rent, clothes and medical assistance.

Since January 1, this family has received from Federation, $376.00.

The M—— Family

The M— — family consisting of the parents and six children. The man is two years in Canada, the family six months. The father is a cripple, having been in an accident a year ago and is unable to work. The oldest boy, age sixteen, works and earns $8 a week. The family lives in three rooms poorly furnished. The children are very much undernourished. The father must be sent to the hospital for orthopaedic treatment. Effective handling of this case, supervising the family budget, supplying sufficient food and clothing, together with coal and rent, would take not less than from $80 to $100 per month.

R— — Family

Mrs. R— — was deserted immediately after her marriage eighteen years ago, by her husband, who has since managed to evade the law and refuses to support her. Mrs. R—— has worked very hard during these years, to give her daughter a good education and a good upbringing. Her daughter, Nan, for the past two years has been seriously ill and underwent an operation which almost cost her her life. The best medical attention has been given to Nan. Since her daughter's illness, Mrs. R—— has been unable to return to work. She has lost much in energy and strength. Furthermore Nan needs her mother's attention during her illness. The Federation assists Mrs. R—— with rent $15 a month and an allowance of $7 weekly.

During the summer Nan was sent out for three weeks to the country, at a cost of $12.50 a week.

Since March 1st this family has received from the Federation the large sum of $275.
